Wall Street Hysteria

Recently President Bush of the Missouri Pacific and the Rio Grande hastened west after a three days' visit in New York, where, he stated, "everything was indigo-blue." He hastened to get away and go to the west, "where the sun is shining." It was a good talk he gave to the New York papers as he started west. The conditions that he found in the great metropolis are certainly a wonder to the people of this country at large. It appears that the New York financial men have been in a condition of semi-panic, ready to do most anything, without realizing what they were doing or actually sensing the effect of their acts.

So apprehensive did the situation become last week that Secretary McAdoo assured the "street" that he was ready to release the $500,000,000 in emergency currency which had been prepared by his predecessor, Secretary McVeagh, upon deposit with approved securities, as contemplated in the Vreeland law. Of course, there was no real occasion for the assurance; there was no occasion for the issue of this emergency. But, curiously enough, his announcement seemed to have a magical effect for good upon Wall street. The hysterical condition of Wall street, in connection with this promise of Secretary McAdoo, is very well treated as follows in an editorial in the New York Tribune:

"Wall street is easily made happy. On Wednesday it was in the doldrums. On Wednesday night the secretary of the treasury announced that if it was needed $500,000,000 of emergency currency was ready to be issued. Everyone knew that it wasn't needed. Everyone knew that it wouldn't be issued. And yet everyone, we speak in the Wall street sense, was immediately and immensely reassured. The rebound to confidence was enormous.

"The suggestion is made that the Wilson administration took Wall street's flurries over the railroad rate decision, when that decision was imperfectly understood, seriously, and was on the verge of a panic itself. Mr. McAdoo denies this, saying that his announcement was purely formal and made in response to inquiries whose source was far from New York. Perhaps Wall street was not convinced. Perhaps it was cheered by what it took to be the spectacle of the administration fumbling sympathetically with its $500,000,000 emergency notes at the merest passing signs of distress in the market. At any rate, it was cheered. We feel much better."

Lobby Investigation Grows Interesting

Now that the senate committee investigating the charge of President Wilson about the existence of a tariff lobby has been instructed to inquire into the president's own activities in forcing through this legislation, a very interesting line of inquiry may be opened. An opportunity is afforded at once to learn the truth as to certain reports which have been in circulation in Washington concerning the relations between the president and Senator Thompson of Kansas. Mr. Thompson was said to be concerned about the welfare of the beet sugar concern at Garden City, Kansas, where he lives, and it was reported that he was inclined to oppose the provision of the tariff bill reducing the duty on sugar. About that time, Henderson Martin, the democratic state chairman of Kansas, came to Washington for the purpose, as he announced, of "cutting the pie." Mr. Martin saw the president and subsequently announced that a certain appointment would be made in Wichita. Senator Thompson, as the story goes, was opposed to this appointment and wrote a note to the president expressing his feelings. It is reported that the president promptly replied, expressing surprise and asking Mr. Thompson to come to see him. Mr. Thompson did go to the White House and thereafter it was announced that the Wichita appointment would not be made.

Recently, Thomas W. Morgan, of Ottawa, Kansas, was appointed warden of the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth. This is regarded in Washington as a personal victory for Senator Thompson, who had unsuccessfully recommended Morgan's appointment to Attorney General McReynolds. The job is considered one of the juiciest political plums in the west.

Now it is reported that Senator Thompson is prepared to support the administration at all points on the tariff bill and has no further thought of fighting free sugar. This attitude may have nothing to do, of course, with these patronage matters, and that is one of the things which the new line of investigation may determine.

The English Suffragettes

The British worm has finally turned upon the militant suffragettes, and Thursday a London judge who sentenced six of them to jail for terms ranging from six to eighteen months virtually told them that they might starve themselves if they wished, but they might expect no recommendation from him that they be released if they went on a hunger strike.

In dealing with the crimes committed by the fanatical suffragettes, the patience of the English courts has been unparalleled. Consideration for their sex and the fact that they thought they were working for a great cause have induced the judges to be lenient to the women, but apparently that policy has run its course. The convicted women declare that they are ready to sacrifice themselves by starvation.

It is a pitiful state of affairs and difficult to understand; but crimes of violence cannot count in any cause, and it would seem as if the extremists among the English suffragettes have delayed the emancipation of women for many years.
